

CNF: Mini-Essay 3 (Min: 500 words)

For this essay, our goal is to write an essay that looks outward while also looking in. Our goals are twofold, to write about an object while also writing about ourselves. The outside object could be anything -- a band, a movie, a TV show, a food, a place, a vehicle, anything you have some investment in or attachment to.

Within this essay, you should at one point describe the outside object in detail. Consider doing outside research for additional insight or context. You should also at one point describe how this object has intersected with a scene from your own life (directly or indirectly). It could be in the background of a memory, the subject of discussion with friends or family, or it could be the direct subject of your memory. The important thing is that we are combining the objective and the personal, describing this outside object as it exists in the world while also describing how it exists in your world.
