

Instructions:

Observations: Over the next two days, make two simple observations about the world around you. These observations can be related to anything you encounter, such as nature, technology, everyday objects, or interactions.

Questions: For each observation, produce a question that you're curious about. Your questions should start with phrases like "Why does..." or "What happens when..."

Write-Up: Write a brief paragraph for each observation and question. Include details about what you observed and why you find it interesting. Be sure to phrase your questions clearly.
