

Journey Through the Excretory System

Instructions

1. With your partner, you will create a story from the perspective of a drop of liquid on a journey through the excretory system.
2. The journey must include information about the organs involved in the journey, as well as their responsibilities. Be sure to include skin, liver, and lungs.
3. You may choose the type of liquid.
4. Your story must include illustrations, drawings, or images from the Internet or other resources.
5. It will be written in book form using construction paper or other available materials.
6. Use appropriate language and the terminology from the content pages and other resources.
7. Your story should include the drop of water's path prior to its entry into the body to its inevitable exit.
8. As long as the path, and other related information, is correctly described, you are free to be creative as much as possible.
9. Create an interesting title for the journey.
10. Once the story, illustrations, images and drawings are completed, you will read and share your Journey Through the Excretory System to the class.
