Topic Bank

- Is online learning an effective substitute for in-person education?
- Should schools require physical education?
- Should students be allowed to use phones in class?
- Is “cancel culture” an effective approach to social change?
- Should photoshop be banned?
- Should college education be free for everyone?

For our first sample of writing, you’re going to pick one of the above topics and plan an argumentative essay for it.

1. Which topic is going to be for you?
2. What is your stance on that topic?
3. What are your initial reasons?
4. What is a potential counterargument?

5. What could be a good premise (a general principle most people agree with that can link the reasons to your claim)
6. Start searching for evidence and give me at least two initial sources. Link them below and find a good fact from each that you may use in your essay.
